HBO's smash 'Six Feet Under'

By John Crook
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

Most of U.S. mainstream television is so relentlessly, safely middlebrow that H.L. Mencken may have been right: "No one ever went broke underestimating the taste of the American public."

Once in a while, however, a show will take such a fearless creative leap that it captures the public fancy through its sheer audacity. And let's face it, shows just don't get much more audacious than "Six Feet Under," the addictive comedy-drama series beginning its second season Sunday, March 3, on HBO.

To their everlasting credit, the HBO executives shepherding this show to the air didn't worry about pandering to a broad-based audience. Instead, the cable home of "Oz" and "The Sopranos" told the show's Oscar-winning creator, "American Beauty" screenwriter Alan Ball, to trust his instincts and let the material get just as dark as it needed to be.

What they got as a result was a startling, funny, upsetting, unpredictable and profoundly moving meditation on how a flawed but loving family finds the strength to carry on each day, even while surrounded by death. In January, "Six Feet Under" smugly walked off with the Golden Globe Award as best television drama series, defeating both "The Sopranos" and NBC's populist "The West Wing."

"We were lucky to be able to produce the entire first season in a vacuum," says Ball. "We did all 13 episodes before any of them aired. I was just doing a show that I thought I would watch, so I was surprised at the response. I thought there was an audience for the show, but I didn't think it would be as big as it turned out to be."

'Confessions' offers twist on classic

By John Crook
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

"Confessions of an Ugly Stepsister," an ABC movie premiering Sunday, March 10, may sound like a lost episode of "The Jerry Springer Show," with its deliberately lurid, ripped-from-the-tabloids title promising the gleeful airing of family secrets.

The reality is something far different. For this adaptation of Gregory Maguire's critically acclaimed 1999 novel of the same title is a smart, funny yet surprisingly poignant adaptation of the Cinderella story, transplanted to 17th century Holland. Azura Skye, Stockard Channing and Jonathan Pryce star.

Viewed from the perspective of Cinderella's stepfamily, "Confessions" opens as the once-rich Margarethe (Channing) returns, almost penniless, to her native Holland with her two daughters, plain but resourceful Iris (Skye) and sweet but slow-witted Ruth.

Margarethe eventually charms her way into a job as housekeeper in the home of wealthy tulip merchant Van Den Meer (David Westhead), while Clara (Jenna Harrison), his beautiful yet sullen and reclusive daughter, only reluctantly lets Iris become her friend.

Sensing upward mobility at hand, Margarethe soon seduces Van Den Meer into marrying her, but her greed quickly leads to financial disaster during the 1636 collapse of the tulip market. Now, the family's fortunes may well ride on an upcoming ball, where Margarethe desperately hopes the Prince (Mark Dexter) may take a shine to Iris. Complications involving mistaken identities and lost slippers propel the story to its touching resolution.

Snow White gets new attitude

By John Crook
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

Fairy-tale princesses may live happily ever after, but getting there can be less than half the fun.

Just ask Kristin Kreuk, the Canadian actress who has the title role in ABC's "Snow White: The Fairest of Them All," which premieres Sunday, March 17.

While most of the work on the lavish and imaginative production went smoothly, Kreuk says filming one signature scene — where Snow White flees in terror from the man her jealous stepmother has sent to kill her — was no walk on the beach.

"That was really hard," she laughs. "I ripped my skirt — actually, it came off! It was pouring rain, and there were all these tree roots on the ground. My instincts were to pick up my skirt, but I wasn't allowed to, so I tripped and fell."

If that scene tested her spunk, Kreuk already had arrived in full mettle for the role, because her Snow White is a bit edgier and more wounded than the cheerful, bluebird-grooming Disney heroine most viewers may remember.

"When I first read the script, she was different from the way she appears in our movie, but Caroline (Thompson, the director and co-writer) changed her after talking to me," the actress explains. "Any normal person who grew up for 16 years in a household like that with a stepmother who hates you and a father who is under a spell and virtually ignores you is bound to be a little bitter and unhappy."

Whoopi Goldberg will return for her fourth stint as host of the Academy Awards at 7:30 p.m. Sunday on ABC.

Academy Awards pass baton

By Jay Bobbin
TvData Feature Writer

New producer, new location, familiar show.

No matter who supervises the Academy Awards, the ceremony traditionally is among any year's highest-rated TV events. That's not likely to change when ABC broadcasts the 74th annual edition Sunday, March 24, from Hollywood's new Kodak Theatre.

Whoopi Goldberg will return for her fourth stint as host, and special honors will go to past winners Sidney Poitier and Robert Redford. Director Arthur Hiller ("Love Story"), former president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences — the organization that puts on the show, will receive the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award. Scheduled presenters include Tom Hanks and last year's winners Russell Crowe, Julia Roberts, Benicio Del Toro and Marcia Gay Harden.

This Oscar gala marks a major passing of a baton behind the scenes. Gilbert Cates produced the ceremony for many years, and now it's Laura Ziskin's turn. Ziskin, who also is the producer of the much-anticipated "Spider—Man" movie, got the job thanks to her significant other, Oscar-winning screenwriter Alvin Sargent ("Ordinary People").

"He's great friends with Frank Pierson, who's the new president of the Academy," she says of Sargent. I've watched the Academy Awards all my life, and I've occasionally turned to Alvin and said, 'Boy, I would love to produce that.'"

Paul Reiser plays doctor in need

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

It's been awhile since the last TV project Paul Reiser was mad about.

The actor-comic has taken it relatively easy since 1999, when he ended his seven-year run as star and producer of the series "Mad About You." He returns to the small screen as a New York psychiatrist diagnosed with leukemia in the Showtime movie "Strange Relations," premiering Sunday, March 31.

Reiser plays Dr. Jerry Lipman, suddenly in need of a bone-marrow transplant, who receives more shocking news courtesy of his mother (Oscar winner Olympia Dukakis, "Moonstruck"): He is adopted.

Lipman is able to track down his biological mother (Julie Walters) and two brothers he didn't know he had (Tony Maudsley, Ian Puleston-Davies) in England, initially keeping his condition a secret from them. Things get even more complicated when he falls for the ex-wife of one of his newfound siblings.

Reiser says he agreed to star in "Strange Relations" largely because of the script by "Saturday Night Live" alumnus Tim Kazurinsky. "When I first read it," Reiser recalls, "I thought, 'Hmm, that's nice, but I don't know.' Then, I found myself thinking about it. It moved me in ways I didn't expect, and for the next day or two, it just kept resonating with me. When I was told that Julie Walters was going to be in it, that was pretty darned tempting. Finally, the combination of those factors made it hard to say 'No.' "
